- (1) expresses its concern that:
 - (a) the legislation is being dealt with in indecent haste and with inadequate consideration;
 - (b) the Government’s claim that the legislation will ‘solve the problem’ of unacceptable content is not supported by the reality that the vast bulk of internet content is generated outside Australia;
 - (c) the proposals, including the idea of mandatory internet service provider filters, are unworkable and easily by-passed;
 - (d) the application of the narrowcasting classification regime to the regulation of internet content has not been thoroughly analysed and may well require revisiting in the future, in view of rapidly changing and converging technology; and
 - (e) the legislation does not include a sunset clause, or provision for review, given the speed of technological change in this area; and
- (2) recommends that:
 - (a) efforts should be made by the Government to pursue international agreements on the regulation of internet content; and
 - (b) substantially more emphasis should be placed on end-user empowerment though information and education campaigns for parents, schools and guardians about the use of the internet and of end-user filter devices”—

29 PRIVILEGE—STATEMENT BY SPEAKER

The Speaker referred to the complaint of breach of privilege raised yesterday by Dr Theophanous concerning actions of National Crime Authority officers in relation to inquiries involving him.

The Speaker stated that it did appear that information obtained from tapped telephone calls had been used in the questioning of people and that alleged actions of, or statements by, the honourable member had been referred to in interviews. The Speaker further stated that, as he comprehended it, the information provided to this point did not reveal evidence that the National Crime Authority was acting other than in accordance with lawful authority, or evidence of an improper purpose on the part of those involved.

The Speaker concluded that, in the circumstances known to him, he did not believe he would be justified in allowing precedence to a motion.
